

---

Lecturer – Biology / Astrobiology

CEA CAPA Education Abroad is an established leader in the development and administration of quality international education programmes, partnering with universities and colleges across the USA and around the world, providing a full range of programmes and integrated services designed to support all aspects of international education. Academic excellence, integrity and innovation in education abroad are at the centre of CEA CAPA's endeavours.

CEA CAPA is currently looking for suitably qualified individuals to join our faculty team in London to teach a course for first year undergraduate students in any one of (1) astrobiology, (2) biological anthropology - human origins, evolution; (3) nutrition and the microbiome. This would be an introductory course for non-specialist first year students and would include writing exercises and appropriate experiential field study opportunities.

The course is taught to undergraduate students in their first year of study and runs in the autumn semester from wk/comm Sept 9 for 12 weeks.

The ideal candidate would have:

1. a PhD in hand or near completion (preferably), or a Master's Degree in a relevant subject;
2. experience of teaching in a higher education environment, especially in working within the HE sector in the US and/or with American students abroad, particularly first year students;
3. a participative, flexible and creative approach to teaching and learning, including experiential learning;
4. evidence of positive student evaluations from prior teaching experiences;
5. a relevant publication record or academic interest in a relevant field;
6. highly developed facilitation and communication skills;
7. a willingness to contribute to course design and development;
8. previous experience with using Canvas or a similar LMS for teaching and learning.

Flexibility in scheduling is essential. Faculty are responsible for all aspects of course preparation, teaching and assessment, working closely with CEA CAPA Academic Management to track module progress and ensure quality.

Applicants must be legally eligible to work in the UK. These are sessional fixed-term contracts for services and not employment. Candidates must be registered, or be able to register, as self-employed in the UK.

Prospective candidates should submit letters of interest and current CVs to LondonAMT@ceacapa.com , providing evidence of how they meet the selection criteria. Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis until the position is filled.